that is incredibly kind of you to say. And I needed it!. I just was trying to fill in my Templeton query, I wrote the executive summary, and lost it because I went to do something for 20 minutes and now my careful paragraph is gone, even though they say they autosave. (which I'm sure they do) I'm not sure I'll make it this cycle for Templeton, though I'd hoped to. I am good at deep reading, yes, but can't do basic clerical work and don't have any help for the littlest stuff.

I do have the finance director of EdLabs, where I am now affiliated, working with me to get very real numbers for you on the HGSE piece of this project.--that is the stuff for teachers before we get to WGBH episodes. They will administer any funds for Harvard not given directly to the Ed School, and they are very good at this.

And I've asked WGBH to give an accounting of how we spent the 100,000 that funded the pilot...

Thank you Jeffrey. As I've said, Poetry 1.1 anytime.

Without a doubt the best hour, out of a week of hours , was Lisa's deep reading , lesson 1.0
